Living Out Love Locally ▶ Globally

by Jamie Johnson

There's something about context that helps us make sense of the world. I still distinctly remember the discombobulating experience of seeing my grade school teacher at the grocery store—"Don't you live in the classroom?" Some days my work at George Fox feels similarly disorienting, but providing context for the different places in which I serve helps me to remember who I am and to what God has called me in this season of life. Here are a few parts of my context:

The Bauman Stage: I spend a lot of time in Bauman Auditorium. As the associate university pastor of chapel programs, I have schedules to create, speakers to invite, sermons to prepare, and bands to rehearse in order to make our twice-weekly chapel services engaging and worshipful for our students.

The Football Locker Room: As chaplain for the George Fox football team, I get to spend a lot of time with the players and coaching staff. In this role I attend practices and stand on the sidelines during games, sometimes engaging in theological conversations with players, sometimes praying for injured players, and sometimes catching passes while the team warms up. But in the locker room, where we hold weekly Bible studies, we get to explore who God is and how God is working in their lives as student athletes at George Fox.

The Classroom: Every semester I also teach a couple of classes in the College of Christian Studies. From introductory Bible and theology classes to upper division Christian ministry courses, I get to journey alongside students as we seek to learn from and listen to the Holy Spirit.

Maybe you can see why I have a difficult time answering when someone asks "What do you do?" Who am I? Am I a pastor? A professor? A propastor? A pastfessor? It seems I've spent so much time trying to figure out the answer to that question that I can sometimes (often?) miss what God is calling me to right now—and that is to be present here, in this moment, right now.

If I'm honest, I too often feel as though none of these categories and contexts are the right "fit." I worry I might have missed a turn along the way, of having been too concerned about outcomes and incomes and not enough about welcomes.

This is what the Holy Spirit has been saying to me every step of the way—"welcome!" There is no place of arrival in life with God. All along this journey Jesus says to me—to you—welcome! Even though there is more journeying to do, more forming to be done, we are welcome in every context, even the grocery store.

So that's what I strive to do in my work at Fox: accept the welcome being offered to me by Jesus while also learning to extend the same welcome to those I get to work with every day.

College Scholarships for undergraduates will be available for those who consider NFC their church home and who attend Friends colleges or universities such as George Fox. Find an application at the welcome center, pick one up from the church office during the week, or download it from this link. Return your completed application by June 15. We ask that students reapply each year for this scholarship.

The Listening Life Group that Steve Fawver led on Wednesday nights prior to his sabbatical continues to meet with Gail Hutchinson as facilitator. The group meets in the Hutchinsons' home at 2301 Alder Lane in Newberg, Wednesday evenings, 6:45 to 8:30 p.m. The group plans to meet at least through May and most likely for longer. The group is open to anyone on a drop-in basis. The format will focus on a short Scripture passage read in a manner similar to lectio divina, with the expectation that the Holy Spirit would allow participants to listen then apply and share their impressions. Light refreshments and a time of prayer are included each evening. For more information, please call Gail (704-661-8837) or Hutch (503-487-7218).

Note: Because of a scheduling conflict, the group will meet at Ron Woodward's home on Wednesday, May 18.

NFC ALL-CHURCH WORK MORNING

Saturday, May 21
8:30 - 11:30 a.m.

ALL COMERS!

Join the Sandals Sunday school class for a three-week series titled "Reading Romans Responsibly" led by Mary Schmitt, a professor in the George Fox College of Christian Studies.

Romans is a book that often gets mined for "one-liners." But to read Romans responsibly is to attend to the whole letter and also to the particular context to which the letter originally was written. To achieve this, we will take a unique starting point: the end of the letter, in which the situation at Rome is most clearly displayed. Then the subsequent classes will work backward through the letter for a potentially fresh look at a seemingly familiar text.

NFC's Calendar on the Web!

Every Sunday during the month of April, more than 100 people from NFC watched videos and participated in discussion groups that focused on different Christian views on homosexuality. Thank you to the 59 people who filled out a questionnaire about the experience! The elders wanted everyone to see the results from the survey:

We are encouraged that the experience of learning and discussing together resulted in lowered apprehension and better understanding of different perspectives. The elders are aware that these discussion groups were only a narrow slice of the area of human sexuality and are considering further ways to learn together and encourage deeper faithfulness as we each seek to live obediently to God.
